SCOTCH & BRITISH BEEF

We source our beef from the highlands of Scotland and the South West of England because these are the areas with vast green clean pastures far from industry with pure spring water where the large herds are reared with expert care from selection in conception through to slaughter.

Three things are essential in the rearing of the best beef; environment, welfare, and using only selected suckler herds. Diet and welfare have the greatest influence on eating quality.

Definition of suckler herds:
The majority of beef in the UK, France and the Continent is dairy beef—that is to say a by-product of the dairy industry where cows must calve each year to produce milk for human consumption. Suckler herds are specially bred cattle for beef where the herd run together and the young calf suckle from their mother’s milk as nature intended.

We offer a full range of cuts. Below is a small selection.

LAMB

We have long since thought that Cornwall and Devon are the perfect places to grow lamb, granite based pastures is a haven for natural wild herbs to grow. The slightly warmer climate and clean air are due to the lack of road pollution and wonderful sea breezes help to develop the natural flavour and the rugged but non-mountainous terrain mean that the lambs are worked enough so as to reduce unwanted fat but not so much as to create excessive muscle.

We favour Lamb raised in Cornwall due to the lush, consistent quality of the pastures. Dry ageing the lamb for 5/6 days will ensure it has the finest appearance and eating qualities.

SPANISH PORK

The two main types of Spanish hams are Serrano ‘white hoof’ (pata Blanca)—and Iberian ‘black hoof’ (pata negra or Iberico). These two types have distinctive aroma, flavour and colour. The curing of Serrano hams entails updating of traditional methods whilst respecting the natural processes of the past and the absence of additives. For this only sea salt is used. The duration of the salting is determined by the weight of each ham.

Duck

Our ducks are exclusively bred in the heart of East Anglia, producing succulent, meaty and flavoursome ducks. The ducks have a rich delicately gamey flavour and around 20% more breast meat than other ducks. The duck livers are ideal for salads, pates and casseroles. The ducks are traditionally dry plucked which means not only do they look better but they shrink less during cooking and have a crisp flavoursome skin.

GAMMON & HAM

Sandridge Farm hams

The Brunham
Starts its long maturation as a dry cured ham and then goes into a darker mood with molasses and juniper to finally emerge about eight months later with a coal black rind hiding its ruby red centre.

The Devyses
With its strong brewing connection, no surprise to find the rich flavour of the hops coming through.

The Trubridge
A dry cure, rare nowadays, because of the time it takes and the weight losses, similar to York ham, preferred by those with a delicate palate.

The Chipnam
A traditional ham that has a deep pink colour and is firm when cut. Its full flavour made it the favourite dish on the farmhouse table at Harvest suppers.

The Golden Rind
A ham naturally smoked over oak and beach sawdust for 2–3 days recreating the essence of Farmhouse Inglenook smoking.

CHICKEN

Despite being the most ubiquitous meat product, free range chicken breasts succulent flavour, texture and benefits from high-integrity rearing and processing. Typically fed on quality vegetable based feed, the meat is free from the influence of GM products and chemicals.

SMOKED SCOTTISH SALMON

Inspired by the exceptional quality of fresh Scottish salmon, Harry Forman developed a cure that complemented its unrivalled flavour. The deliciously mild London Cure was born and soon it was the talk of reputable establishments around the capital. A century later H. Forman & Son remains a family concern, the last of the original London smokeries, with Lance Forman, Harry’s great grandson, flying the flag for the famous London Cure.

Remaining faithful to principles established in 1905—the freshest salmon, a little salt, just the right amount of oak smoke—he is upholding traditional values and skills that would otherwise have died out long ago, along with one of gastronomy’s finest foods.

Salmon is the oldest gourmet food known to man. Throughout the ages this magnificent ‘King’ of fish has adorned the table of many a royal feast and banquet.

The curing and smoking of salmon are crafts that take years to master. Our main supplier takes pride in maintaining the excellent traditions of Salmon, so that our genuine wild smoked scottish salmon from the River Tay is justly regarded as the world’s finest.
